Grapes and plums, usually comparatively cheap in July, are nearing the luxury categories, while apples and peace ches are far more plentiful and their prices have come down. Oranges and grape-fruit — selling at 650 pruta a kilogram — are in good condition after cold storage. While this price is far above the seasonal price of the fruit, the oranges and grape-fruit compete favourably with fruit now in season, which is selling at even higher prices. Banamas from the spring crop are still obtainable — also from storage—and will probably last till the first of the autumn crop reaches the shops.

Minimum prices of plums jumped from 300 pruta a kilogram last July to 500 pruta this year, and few in deed are available at the low price. Similarly, while the official minimum price for grapes is still 400 pruta a kilogram, they are selling at prices reaching II.4.200 a kilogram.
